MOVIE REVIEW By Dolan Grey

“Me and Earl and the Dying Girl”

Me and Earl and the Dying Girl is a movie with a meshed plot. Much like that of “The Duff” or “Easy A” but with less coordination, you still manage to see the plot within the story. Like the few exemplified movies, this movie is about a boy, a new found friend, and his extreme paranoia. The movie supplies the audience with a perspective that not only girls suffer from being labeled in an environment in high school. Along with that fresh perspective, the plot shows you that you can make a difference in someone’s life despite how little you think of yourself.

The main character Greg is a selfish, paranoid, and preserved teenage boy who is forced to befriend Rachel, a girl diagnosed with leukemia. Although he doesn’t know how to act upon being friendly to a girl who is dying, he finds out that his obsession with being labeled doesn’t matter in the real world and that Rachel’s perspective of him is highly thought of that it opens his eyes that the world doesn’t revolve around him.

The movie is quite a rollercoaster because you often question yourself as to why you are watching this and what is the main plot. However when you watch the movie, you see how every weird aspect helps enforce the character’s likeness in the movie and that if you can empathize and sympathize, you would be a little more open-minded.

A LITTLE FRIENDSHIP NEVER KILLED ANYONE

TV SHOW REVIEWS By C. Javier

THE FLASH Season 2

The first season of ‘The Flash’ was definitely one of the most successful T.V. series in 2015, and as the series goes on, more and more “Meta-Humans” are coming out that will surely put the audience on the edge of their seat. This series without a doubt earns 5 stars on the list of my best on-going series on CW.

There are three main reasons why I like CW’s second season of The Flash. The first one is how the actors/actresses give justice to their characters. They are so good that even the Meta-Humans, who sometimes shows up for only one episode, are doing a great job. The second reason is the twists that they are putting in the series. I do not want to spoil anything, so you guys have to watch and see what I mean. And lastly, Cisco—my second favorite character in the series, continues to give such brilliant names to the heroes and villains. All the names are so simple yet very catchy.

Anyways, I know for a fact that Flash Fan clubs cannot wait for the next episode because I am absolutely one of you then! However, for those who haven’t watched the series yet, it is time for you to feel the Flash fever, because I can assure you that you will never regret being on the Flash Team!

Film Marketing Review

By Joshua R. Lei

“DEADPOOL”

Do you happen to know a mercenary with an astonishing healing factor and an explicit tongue to go along with his vulgar demeanor? A mercenary copied from another original mercenary rom- an entirely different comical universe but brought to life with some wacky 4th wall breaking? Do you know the mercenary that is often considered to be the COMPLETE OPPOSITE of our friendly neighborhood Spiderman?

If you’ve answered yes, then you’re probably thinking of the same 4th wall breaking, never ending yapping psychopath; yes that’s right, the pansexual merc with a mouth, DEADPOOL. Those who are big long time fans (much like me) already know what to expect from his upcoming film being released February 12, 2016, and those who aren’t too familiar with this icon, then boy are you in for a treat. Despite not knowing exactly how the film will turn out, the marketing team for the upcoming film Deadpool is doing a MARVELous job at selling how fun and entertaining this blockbuster film will be. From Deadpool’s first trailer, to his direct address to the Australians on Australia day, the marketing team for Deadpool sure knows how to sell a film before it’s even released. Truly, there’s not much to say, what the marketing team has already put out already speaks for itself. Watch the trailer once and be astonished, watch EVERY trailer and you’ll get a glimpse of whom exactly we’ll be dealing with on February 12.

So even if you’re single during this month of Valentines, Deadpool has you covered.

How to DIY nail art for Valentine's Day

Paint your nails whichever color you want.

Once it's dry, put 4 thin tapes on top.

Paint over the tape with whatever color you wish to overlap.

Once it's dry, slowly take off the tape.

Start drawing tiny dots to form a heart shape.

The final result should look like this.

Now you're done! All your fingernails should look like the photo on the right! You may choose whichever nail polish you wish to use. Be creative!
